DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 4, 9, 11 and 12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Aida et al. (5,987,495).

Aida et al disclose a medical probe for use with tissue, comprising:

an elongate member (Figure 17, # 126) having a proximal end and a distal end;

an operative element (water bag # 124) carried at the distal end of the elongate member, wherein the operative element comprises an expandable-collapsible body; and a stabilizing shroud (125 and 144) circumscribing at least a portion of the operative element, the shroud configured for applying a vacuum force to secure the operative element relative to the tissue; wherein the shroud is secured to the distal end of the elongate member; wherein the shroud circumscribes an entirety of the operative element, and wherein the shroud is composed of a material exhibiting a low electrical conductivity (the rubber ring portion and col. 15, line 58-col. 16, line 38).

Claims 10, 23, 24, 27, 29, 30, 39, 41, 43, 44, 48-50, 60 and 63 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Hecke et al. (6,176,855).

Art Unit: 3739

As to claims 10, 23, 24, 41, 43 and 48-50, Hecke et al. disclose a medical probe for use with tissue, comprising:

an elongate member (Figure 4, # 7) having a proximal end and a distal end;
an operative element (laser # 10) carried at the distal end of the elongate member; and a stabilizing shroud (sheath # 1 with annular vacuum channel and stabilizer # 14) circumscribing at least a portion of the operative element, the shroud comprising a wall and one or more vacuum ports located on the wall for applying a vacuum force to secure the operative element relative to the tissue (col. 2, line 21-col. 3, line 17).

As to claims 27, 29, 30, 39, 44, 60 and 63, Hecke et al. disclose a method of performing a medical procedure on a patient using a medical probe having an operative element and a shroud circumscribing at least a portion of the operative element, comprising:

introducing the medical probe within the patient to place the operative element adjacent a target epicardial or cardiac tissue site;

applying a vacuum force to the shroud to secure the operative element relative to the target tissue site; and operating the operative element to perform the medical procedure including delivering ablation energy on the target tissue site while the operative element is secured relative to the target tissue site (col. 2, line 21-col. 3, line 17).

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 13, 32, 34, 35, 42, 45, 51-59, 61, 62, 64 and 65 are allowed.

Claims 2, 2, 17, 28, 38, 40, 46 and 47 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
